

Dear Health Donor Organization,

We are writing to introduce AMIRSAN (USA), an American program coordination and medical engineering organization supporting donor-funded deployment of healthcare and education infrastructure in low-resource regions.

AMIRSAN works in close coordination with governments and qualified delivery partners to translate officially defined national needs into donor-ready, implementable projects. Our model does not request financial contribution from host governments. Instead, we mobilize donor financing to support deployable medical facilities, education continuity programs, and essential medical supply networks.

Today, we would like to draw your attention to a country facing significant healthcare capacity gaps—not due to lack of commitment, but due to resource and infrastructure constraints. With your support, critical services can be expanded rapidly and sustainably.

AMIRSAN is committed to these calls for support; however, our role is coordination and implementation—not financing. Your contribution can directly enable lifesaving infrastructure, restore access to care, and support national health priorities identified by local authorities.

Attached, you will find:

- a brief country profile outlining population distribution and priority regions,
- an official letter from the Ministry confirming interest in donor-supported solutions,
- and a summary of the proposed deployment framework.

With your partnership, it is possible to make healthcare access more resilient and our shared world more livable.

We would be honored to explore how your organization can participate in this program.

Sincerely,

Founder & Authorized Representative
